Terrible floods, not only disastrous to property but causing great loss of life, have visited the southern part of British India. Some of the English papers have rather curious ideas concerning the Boston Jubilee. For instance, the London [illegible] says that the people of the United States have contributed $5,000,000 toward the expense of the festival, that the colosseum was built to hold a hundred thousand persons, that the arrangements occupied twelve months in their completion, and engaged the special attention of eight sub committees, including among their members Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Lowell, Mr. Sumner and Gov. Washburn.

The prohibitory liquor law of the State of Maine, as amended by the late Legislature, secures to that State its leading position on this question. Cider is included in the prohibited fluids, innholders must give bonds not to sell liquor before they can get a license, a man may be arrested on suspicion that he has liquor concealed about him for unlawful purposes, persons once convicted of violating the law are compelled to give bonds not to do so again for a year, and finally all Sheriffs and District Attorneys are directed to obey all orders of the Governor relative to the enforcement of the liquor law. Apparently not a gimlet-hole is left for the ardent to run through into the State of Maine.

SATURDAY MORNING JULY [illegible] 187[illegible]

Timely Words from Horace Greeley

In 18[illegible] [illegible] kept in an [illegible] of the State of N[illegible] [illegible] showed evidence in Mr. Greeley and [illegible] his well known [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] the representatives [illegible] party gave him the [illegible] State Comptroller. He was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] termed a proper thing, [illegible] particularly as it was [illegible] well understood that he had [illegible] insatiate hankering for some final position no matter what so[illegible] carried with it the odor of distinction. In accepting he nomination he wrote an excellent letter of which the following is an extract:

> Men whose patriotism barely suffices to take them to the polls when a President or when at least a Governor and members of Congress are to be chosen will not come out this fall. The great army of [illegible] seekers and aspirants to live on the public [illegible] [illegible] attribute vastly to the loss of sulky stay at homes. General Grant, lacking the miraculous power which fed multitudes to repletion on a few small loaves and fishes, has offended these past [illegible] beyond the hope of forgiveness. Let me, therefore, entreat them to go to the polls, and there work and vote simply for the constitutional amendment securing impartial suffrage. They will thus [illegible] that their personal disappointments have not affected their principles, and that their past professions of Republicanism were not insincere.

If says the Albany (N. Y.) Journal this letter had been written last week instead of three years ago, it could not have been more appropriately worded for present use. Now as then the "great army of office seekers," whom Gen Grant has been unable to gratify, are mischievously disposed, and threaten vengeance against the party because its Chief lacks the "miraculous power" to feed them as they desire. It was Mr Greeley's role then, to hold these "sulky stay-at homes" in the traces. He wanted their votes and his exhortation was admirably well worded and earnest. Any course other than that he indicated certainly would "proclaim that their personal disappointment had affected their principles, and that their past professions of Republicanism were not sincere."

But how is it now? It is no longer his policy to secure Republican votes to Republican candidates. His interest lies in another direction and instead of being chagrined or offended with the "sulky stay at homes," or grieved that any Republican should think of doing what would prove his "profession of Republicanism insincere," he is himself doing this very thing, and is only happy when he hears that others are following his bad example.

If it could ever be said of any man, "out of thine own mouth art thou condemned, thou wicked servant," it can be now truthfully said of Horace Greeley. It is his "personal disappointments" and his inordinate ambition which induce him to day to occupy a position quite as dishonorable as that occupied by the "selfish aspirants" whom he condemned in '69. And in occupying this position, he to day, as they did then, "proclaims that his personal disappointments have affected his principles, and that his past professions of Republicanism were not sincere," or were always held subordinate to his personal aspirations.

Whether he succeeds or fails, history will stamp him with the brand of treachery both to his principles and to his party. Better for his future fame that he had never been tempted to prove himself one of the very weakest if not the most wicked of our public men. The name of Greeley, once respected and honored, will, hereafter and forever, be associated with those of Tyler, Fillmore and Johnson—men whose names are the synonyms of all that is inconsistent, dishonorable and false in political action and party fealty.

An Historic Parallel

Prior to the year 1812, the old Federal party had been successively defeated in three Presidential elections. For twelve years they had been excluded from power. For the same period the Democratic party has been out of power now. In the year 1812 opposition arose in the dominant party to the re-election of President Madison. That opposition was led by De Witt Clinton of New York, a man of large ability and experience, a statesman of wide celebrity, whose talents and character commanded universal respect. A large section of the party were opposed to the re-election of Madison. They claimed that it would be disastrous to force him on the party a second time. The Democracy contained a peace party and a war party. There was an anti administration split off. Prominent men, Senators and Representatives in Congress, and leading politicians in various parts of the country, deserted Madison. Foremost among them was Senator Giles, of Madison's own State (Virginia) a man of great power. These anti administration elements tried to prevent the re nomination of Madison, as Schurz, Trumbull and Fenton tried to prevent the re-nomination of General Grant, and failed. They then bolted and nominated a candidate of their own. This candidate was De Witt Clinton. The old Federal party then occupied precisely the position that the Democratic party occupy now. Long out of power they thought they saw their opportunity. They gathered in New York to nominate candidates. Clinton was urged upon them. It was a bitter pill, for Clinton had always been a Democrat of the Jefferson school. The question was whether it would not be possible to swallow Clinton for the sake of victory. Finally the old traditions of the party were laid upon the altar. "Anything to beat Madison" proved the successful war cry, and Clinton was endorsed for President with Jared Ingersoll for Vice President. Thus the canvass of 1812 presents a complete analogue of the canvass of 1872, only then the split off was from the Democracy, and the Feds furnished the "big end" of the transaction.

The campaign was an unusually exciting one, but the outcome was a triumph of the "straights." Madison received of the electoral vote 128, Clinton 89 while Gerry as Vice President received 131 and Ingersoll 86.

The "Liberal Democratic" movement of 1812 was precisely analagous to the "Liberal Republican" movement of to day. The Federals endorsed "the bolt" and accepted its candidate, precisely as the Democrats have done now. Nothing is wanting to complete the parallel but the defeat of the combination now, as it was defeated then. This final act will be consummated in November. A party which abandons its principles for the sake of expediency invariably comes to grief. It was so with the Federal party in 1812; it was so with the Whig party in 18[illegible] and will be so with the Democratic party in 1872.

The Enterprise pretends to deny on its own authority though, that Lafayette F. Lane has declined to be a Greeley candidate for Elector. If Lane has not declined the dubious honor why does he not declare himself like the Lion of Linn ready to make the sacrifice? The report that he has declined did not originate with us. We would have no interest in having him do so as doubtless Hank Jones of this city or Tony Noltner of the Oregon City Enterprise could either of them take the place if Jasper Johnson should conclude to remain in the East till Horace G. appoints him to a seat on the bench in Colorado, which we understand Jasper is now waiting for.

THE TERRITORIES

John M. Whitworth of Seattle was to deliver the valedictory address at the California University, Oakland, on the 1[illegible]h.

A Mr Phillips of Southern Oregon, has recently driven a band of fifteen blooded horses to Idaho for the purpose of selling them.

Hon F. L. Smith of Olympia, has received a surveying contract in the vicinity of Bellingham Bay, and will leave for that locality in a few days.

The Snoqualmie road is not the pleasantest path in the world over which to travel. Emigrants experience great difficulty in getting through the pass.

Deputy United States Surveyor Farnsworth has surveyed the Mission lands of the old Catholic Mission at Vancouver, which contain five and a half acres.

The water has been all pumped out of the coal mine at Bellingham Bay but no coal has yet been taken out in consequence of the presence of dangerous gases.

Fifteen hundred acres of land were offered at administrator's sale at Vancouver last week but as four dollars was the highest price bid, the land was not sold.

Semiahmoo, Washington Territory, on the American side of the line, has a flourishing settlement, while Mud Bay, on the British side, is desolate, as the Herald of New Westminster says—and asks—why is it so?

The Idaho Statesman of the 20th says some of the Fort Hall Indians are roaming about the Bruneau country, and others have gone through Owyhee county, probably to join Winnemucca. We shall not be surprised to hear in any quarter of trouble with those roving bands of Indians. There don't appear to be any effort to keep the Indians on the reservation.

Governor Bennett, of Idaho has recently visited Boise Valley. He says it appears dull in the Basin though everybody seems to be at work. The principal camp of white men is at Pioneer City. The quartz mills at Quartzburg are pounding away day and night. Water is failing considerably, though it is anticipated that this will be more than an average season.

The Executive order, setting apart Fort Colville and the adjacent country as an Indian Reservation, has been countermanded by another order from the same source which in lieu thereof sets apart the country bounded on the east and south by the Columbia river, on the west by the Okanagon river, and on the north by the British possessions. The Commissioner of the General Land Office has been notified of this action, and the Indians will be located upon their new reserve at an early day.

"Bat" Mealy a diminutive lad, was caught by the belt of some machinery at Albany, on Wednesday and whirled around so fast that it made his head swim, but fortunately the belt broke and let him drop before he was much hurt.

From the Benton Democrat: "Eugene Millener, George Millener, A. Millener, Charles Millener A. Hogan and D. Hogan were arrested on last Sunday charged with assault with intent to kill George Ballard by firing into his house one night last week. On Monday these gentlemen were brought before Justice Privett, when Messrs Strahan and Burnett appeared for the defense, and E. A. Chenoweth for the prosecution. The prosecuting witness, George Ballard, though duly subpoenaed failed to appear. After a hearing the evidence was deemed insufficient to warrant a committal and the parties were discharged."

About Death by Broken Hearts

[From the N. Y. Post.]

"My son they have broken my heart but it is not a bad heart after all," are reported to be the last words of Judge McCunn. It is literally true, we have no doubt that such was the fact. Judge McCunn really died of a broken heart as the phrase is generally understood. His nervous system had received a blow from which it could not rally. The case is no means unusual. [illegible] to blows of this sort sometimes in a few minutes, sometimes in a few hours or days, sometimes in a few months. It was no [illegible] that killed Fisk, no [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] shot recovery, though unlikely, was possible, but shock was deadly. In Fisk's case, undoubtedly it was mental [illegible] to which it may be believed from his conduct on the day of the [illegible] last summer, Fisk was particularly liable to be the victim that was fatal. When this shock is not so altogether ignoble as it was here, but involves some of the higher sentiments, as remorse, or disappointment of some high purpose or despair, then it is [illegible] with the name of "broken heart." In all cases, however, it is the loss of vital force, the impossibility of rallying sufficient nervous energy to resist a blow. McCunn unquestionably died of it, as he said. So did Ananias. So do many men all about us every week. It was one of the remarkable results of the Chicago fire that the "shock" of loss of property, of the intense fear at the moment, of anxiety for the future caused an unusual number of deaths there through the winter. Men died of "broken hearts," that is, broken courage, broken hope, broken spirits, broken energies, broken elasticity, from time to time for months.

"To die of a broken heart" has a pathetic sound, and appeals to our pity or our sympathies. Yet it is sometimes a very ignoble thing to die of, and is usually indicative of radical weakness of character. In Judge McCunn it was altogether natural cause of death. Unscrupulous, ambitious, uncultivated—his fine library was a vanity and a show only—without resources within himself to fall back upon and at the same time living upon the breath of others, having an excess of what the phrenologists call "approbativeness." It was entirely in accordance with his nature when a blow should come that cast him down from the false eminence to which, by crooked paths and devious ways he had raised himself, that the "shock" should kill him. There was no base thing inside the law that McCunn was not capable of, so long as it won him applause or contributed to his success. With negroes hanging in his very sight murdered by the mob, in the riots of 1863, he could stand and address the savage wretches, not only without compunction, but with great inward satisfaction. But convict him of outraging the public sense of right, or any infringement of morality within the reach of law or with the law's hand upon him, and he sinks stricken, unnerved, helpless, hopeless, to a cowardly death. So dying, death comes to him as a just retribution for a life misspent, a career pursued without scruples, unmarked by one worthy act, marked by many that were disgraceful to him as a man and magistrate. That others of his companions in judicial crime have not come to a similar end is only because they are made of sterner stuff and coarser fiber.

Why "the South" Supports Greeley

From Harper's Weekly (Rep.)

One of the most common arguments in favor of the election of Mr. Greeley is that it will reconcile the South. It is time, we are told that the war should be forgotten, and the people of the Southern States made to feel that they are brethren. "Come, then," cries the Sage, "let us clasp hands over the bloody chasm—and lift me into the White House!" Simultaneously with this cry we see that Beauregard, Wade Hampton, Raphael Semmes, and other well-known late Confederate chiefs declare for Mr. Greeley. The Virginia Convention elects Fitz Hugh Lee, Bradley Johnson, Robert Ould, John B. Baldwin, Thomas S. Bocock, and others—all of them conspicuous military and civil officers during the rebellion—delegates to Baltimore. In the city of Baltimore, the first Greeley Club of Maryland is addressed by Colonel Harry Gilmore, the leader of the rebel raid around that city, and Colonel Lerger, of most lamentable fame in connection with the Georgia assassination. Beriah Magoffin of Kentucky, who defied President Lincoln's proclamation, pronounces for Greeley, and ex Governor Vance of North Carolina tells the story of "old Grimes," and declares that, if it be in the hymn-book, it must be sung, that Mr Greeley, nominated at Baltimore, must be supported as the regular Democratic candidate.

Now what we are all concerned to know is the significance of this Southern support of Mr. Greeley. Four years ago the support of these same persons given to Mr. Seymour who was then the regular Democratic candidate, was the argument most strongly urged against him by Mr Greeley the present Democratic candidate. If that support, then was an argument against the success of the Democratic party, is it less so now? It was then said, as it is now, that the Republican policy toward the South was harsh and cruel and that the success of the Democrats would be the earnest of fraternity and peace, and would reconcile the South. But in what way was he to do it? By restoring to power the political party to which the leaders of the rebellion had always belonged. And that was the very reason why Mr Seymour was defeated. The loyal American people did not believe that Democratic success, or an Administration elected by Democrats was the true method of conciliation. For they knew that a Democratic "conciliation" of the South meant the modification and repeal of the Republican policy. And in that they saw only confusion and danger.

Is this situation changed because the candidate is different? Not at all. It is not fraternity, nor reconciliation, nor unity which the representative Southern leaders desire. They wish power and their way to power is the success of the Democratic party. The Southern support is given to Mr Greeley because he is the Democratic candidate, not because he represents no abstract policy of fraternity and reconciliation.

Are the Andes Disappearing?

Travelers who wish to ascend the Andes should lose no time in carrying out their intention, otherwise they will perhaps find no Andes to ascend. These unfortunate mountains seem to be sinking rapidly. A list of the altitudes of some of the most important points determined at intervals of time is given in a recent number of the Ausland, and tells a sad story of diminished proportions. Quito was found by La Condamine in 1745 to be 9,596 feet above the sea. Humboldt in 1803 could only make 9,570 feet of it. Boussingault, in 1831, was startled to find that it was only 9,567 feet. Orton in 1867 found it reduced to 9,520 feet and Reiss and Stubel (doubtless to their honor) found in 1870 that it had shrunk to the ridiculously small size of only 9,350 feet above the level of the sea. It seems Quito has sunk 246 feet in 125 years and Pichincha 218 feet in the same period. Its crater has sunk 125 feet during the last 30 years, and Antisana 165 feet in 64 years. It is, however, a doubtful point whether this continued depression of the Andes is attributable to the sinking of the mountains or the rising of the world. In the meantime it is curious to observe that wherever altitudes really inconvenient they never become depressed. Holborn hill is, barring its viaduct, for all practical purposes as much above the level of the sea as ever it was, and the ascent of Hampstead hill no less a toil to the omnibus horse than in 1745 when La Condamine measured Quito.

SATURDAY MORNING JULY 2[illegible] 18[illegible]

CITY.

THE FIRST RAILWAY.—Wonderful indeed have been the improvements added to steam navigation since the days when Robert Fulton first launched what was derisively termed "Fulton's Folly." Since then the rude clumsy and slow going craft propelled by steam at that time but in its infancy has been supplanted by magnificent floating palaces carrying the great human freights and commercial products from point to point along rivers and across oceans. By said advantageous application steam, our great and indispensable levers of civilization has been so utilized that the speed of steamers has been more than trebled. The invention of the locomotive is of about the same date as the application of steam in propelling boats through the water and almost as great improvements have been from time to time added. Indeed in our rapid strides in progress and invention the most proper way in which to judge what has been accomplished is by comparison. One new invention has followed another in such rapid succession that we fail to [illegible] what now is but by ascertaining what once was.

At the law office of Ex Governor Gibbs in this city, can be seen a picture of the first American railway train drawn by the first locomotive ever [illegible] from the old country. It can easily be estimated the extent of improvements made in the art of railroad mechanism, to compare the ill proportioned rude and primitive steam cart of that date with the ponderous and wonderfully constructed locomotives now in use on both sides of the river. Invention has revolutionized itself. The picture alluded to, represents the train just in the act of starting on a trial trip on the Mohawk and Hudson Railway, the first part of the New York Central Railway from New York to Schenectady. The picture of this scene was first executed at the time of the starting on black paper with a pair of [illegible], by a Mr Brown of Pennsylvania and subsequently lithographed from a photograph of the original now in possession of the Connecticut Historical Society. The view at best is but rudely [illegible], as the art of photography was then but in its incipient stages of development, but [illegible] to show what progress has been made in the last 35 years in railroad engineering. This first trial trip was made on the 31st of July 1832. The train consisted of a rude cart on which was [illegible] a small boiler, in which the steam was [illegible], and was securely attached to the [illegible]. At the rear end of the boiler where the engineer, the fireman and [illegible]man, (all one person) stood, was a small and very imperfectly constructed engine. The [illegible] was attached to one of the "driving wheels" of the cart, by a "connecting rod." Instead of two engines and attachments to four wheels like the locomotives of the present day, there was only one cylinder and one wheel, to draw the train. Immediately following the rude [illegible], was a sort of platform carriage on which were placed a small quantity of fuel to feed the fire, and several barrels containing water with which to replenish the boiler when [illegible]. After this, next came two regular old [illegible] coaches with "boots" at each end, where passengers could sit when there was not sufficient room inside. These differed in no respects from traveling coaches but that a rim several inches in width extended past the "tire" all round the wheels, to prevent them from running off the track. The train was attached by a chain coupling, consisting of three links hooked in at each end of the car. This primitive excuse for a railway train could make but about six miles per hour, which was then considered good time. The following persons were on the train at the trial trip, who, we are informed, were "invited guests": Mr Lansing, ex Gov Yates, Thurlow Weed Esq (then editor of the Albany Evening Journal) Billie Winnie (a well known postman), Major Meigs, Jacob Hays (the noted thief catcher of New York), Mr Dudley, and Joseph Alexander of the Commercial Bank. Some of the "guests" are seated in the "boots" and some inside the car coaches. The trial trip proved satisfactory, and was regarded as a most signal triumph in the science of railroading on this continent. Next Wednesday (31st of July,) it will be forty years since that first achievement in the art of land navigation was made. Four decades have passed away since then, and what a wonderful revolution has been made! Arts, science, engineering and mechanics have attained a degree of perfection little short of the marvelous. Within that time the magnetic telegraph has been born [illegible], and our system of railroads has been developed to the highest possible state of improvement.

There is a rather singular circumstance connected with this trial trip. The engineer who was on board, and run the first train in America was now in this city, or, at least was within the past month. He is now an old gray headed man, bent with the load of years and is now in very indigent circumstances. For the honor of having handled the "throttle valve" of the first locomotive in America (the "John Bull," as she was called), this old man it seems ought to be comfortably pensioned for his remaining days, instead of wandering about the country needy and [illegible]pendent.

SOLDIERS' REUNION.—It was suggested by ex Governor Salomon, of Washington Territory, on Thursday evening at the G A R's reception tendered Gen Hooker, in a short address which he made on that occasion, that it would be a wise thing if all the soldiers engaged in the late rebellion, whether they belong to the Grand Army of the Republic or not, who now reside in this State and Washington and Idaho Territories, to assemble in this city and hold a grand reunion meeting. The invitation, of course extends only to those engaged in the struggle for the Union. The suggestion is certainly a good one, as well as novel. Nothing of the kind has ever been held in the State. There is no reason why the plan could not be successfully carried into effect. The [illegible] could only be satisfactory. By the carrying out of the idea many brave soldiers who [illegible] to maintain the right against an armed [illegible], and to preserve intact and inviolate the [illegible]ity of the Union, could be brought into sociality and fraternal relations, and the many cherished memories of the past be revived. The patriotic fires which once glowed so fiercely could be rekindled on the altars of peace and the principles which once actuated them to answer the call of the nation, be strengthened and refreshed by such social intercourse. Let the suggestion be improved, and the time set for such a reunion of our country's brave defenders.

AN OLD BOOK.—Probably one of the oldest books on the coast, can be seen at the office of Dr Lyon in this city. It is an ancient Latin volume entitled the "Commentaries of Gerome Cardenus on the Aphorisms of Hyppocrates." This old book was printed, as the imprimature declares at "Basileae Ex-officina Henric Petrina, Anno Salutis, M D LXVIII, Mense Martio." According to this, the book is about 304 years old. At that time the printing art was but crudely developed but the typographical appearance of the book is very fair, the letters having been cut tastily and clearly, and the "impression" well taken. The printing was done on tough flexible paper which is now worn and yellow with age and use. Considering the backward condition of the book binding business the volume is very well bound. The cover is the genuine vellum which in many places preserves its original color and smoothness. In numerous places the old cover is perforated by worms and boring bugs. The old monkish imprint adorns each side of the cover consisting of a gilt cross with the letters "I H S," surrounded by a halo. This quaint old volume contains 313 closely printed pages. It is worthy of inspection.

GAS HOLDER.—The city has so materially increased in population and in the number and extent of its business houses, that the Gas Company has found the present gas tank attached to its works at the corner of Front and F streets inadequate to furnish the city with the requisite quantity of the illuminating article. An excavation has accordingly been made at the corner of F and Sixth streets in which will be placed a gas holder, possessing a capacity equal to four times that of the present one. A large quantity of the iron work necessary to be used in its construction has been shipped from New York and is now on the way here. It is expected to have everything prepared by the middle of next November. Several additional gas generating furnaces will probably be attached to those already used. The gas will be forced from the works out to the new receptacle, when it is completed in the same manner that it is driven into the old tank from whence it will be distributed to all portions of the city.

THEATRICAL.—Geo B Waldron accompanied by new attractions will sail this morning on the John L. Stephens for this place.

The Crystal Palace Circus is now on the way overland to this State and will be here about the last of next month.

Jas H [illegible]son Wm Barry and Pierpont Thayer, are performing at McGuire's Opera House, San Francisco.

Mlle Marie Gaugain and pretty and popular danseuse sailed from San Francisco for Victoria on the 20th inst. She will probably visit this city in a few weeks.

Commodore Nutt and Gen Tom Thumb are now rusticating in New Hampshire.

Signor Garbet the trapeze performer gymnast and acrobat and W Forest the noted clog dancer and gymnast have joined the Crystal Palace Circus now on the way to this State.

Marshall & Co's Tycoon Japanese Troupe have reached San Francisco.

THE COW NUISANCE.—Two or three days after the ordinance abating the cow nuisance was passed it is said the pound keeper had thirty cows put up. It cost the owners two dollars each to get them out. They belonged mostly to poor families who depend for much of their living upon their cows. No hardship is greater than to deprive the family of children of milk. Health and life depend upon it. But the poor man has no pasture. He can have none in this neighborhood. He cannot afford to buy milk or to keep his cow in the barn on costly feed. One hard working man is doing so for a few days until he can make arrangements to leave the city. His opinion is that many families will leave for the same reason. If the ordinance required cows to be shut from 9 P M to 6 A M as in Davenport Iowa and in other cities, to prevent their night incursions into flower gardens, no objection would be made. But this law will drive away a large class of the families of laborers which Portland cannot well spare. It unwittingly discriminates against the poor. A word to the wise is sufficient.

A CITIZEN

THEFT.—A man named William Bryant stole the sum of $275 from another man named Henry Brown on Thursday morning. Both were lodging at the same house, on Fifth street between Pine and Oak. Brown, it appears, had received his wages but a few days previous, having been one of the officers on board the Jane A. Falkinburg. As soon as the money was missing Brown swore out a warrant at once for the arrest of Bryant. The latter was soon found and on being arrested confessed the theft. He took the officer out to the foot of Robinson Hill, where he had hid the stolen money. On examining it there was found to be only $260. Bryant had been on a drunk ever since the money was stolen, but had used only $9 out of the amount—a circumstance which certainly ought to be set down to his credit. He confessed that he had taken the money, but gave as a reason that he was in liquor at the time and could not well help it. He was examined yesterday before Judge Denny and held to answer before the Grand Jury in November in the sum of $1 000. In default of bail Bryant was committed.

RELIGIOUS RECEPTION.—On Saturday, 13th inst, we learn from the Sentinel the impressive ceremony of receiving the religious habit at the hands of Most Rev Archbishop Blanchet by Miss Margaret Finning, took place at the Chapel of St Mary's Academy in this city. The officiating prelate was assisted by Very Rev Father Giorda, S J, Superior of the Jesuit missions of the Rocky Mountains, and Rev P F Gibney, cousin of Miss Finning, now Sister Mary Norbet. There were besides present in the Sanctuary Rev P McCormick and Rev C Dolahunty. The whole sisterhood of the Convent, together with a large number of their pupils, were also present on the occasion. Sister Mary Norbet is a native of county Meath, Ireland, and is a niece of Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Lord Bishop of Meath.

ARRESTED.—All our readers will remember the case of Johnny Dougherty who was arrested several months since and confined at the guard house in Vancouver for desertion. Several weeks ago this paper contained an account of his escape from the guard house. About two weeks ago he was arrested in Wasco county, by Sheriff Schutz and brought down to Vancouver. Subsequently he has been court-marshaled and sentenced to hard labor at Fort Alcatraz for the period of one year. Yesterday he was tendered a free pass down on the Ajax, and a person allowed to accompany him to look after his personal welfare. Dougherty will also be entitled to wear some jewelry during his term of confinement.

MAIL ROBBERS.—As will be seen by the U S Court proceedings, all the parties implicated in and arrested on the charge of robbing the stage at Antelope Canyon on the 12th inst, have been indicted by the grand jury. Up to this time there has not been the slightest clue obtained, either as to the exact amount of money stolen, or where it has been deposited. As far as can be ascertained, however, the loss in coin is estimated at or near $4,000. This, however, is a rough guess, and is but little more definite than mere conjecture. It will be some time before it will be known how much has been lost through Wells, Fargo & Co's Express and the Postoffice.

SAILED.—The steamer Ajax, which sailed from this port last evening for San Francisco, carried away the following passengers: W Sheldon & wife, T D Seebold, J D Neill & wife, A H Martin, Mrs S M Knox & daughter, Lina Witsch, P P Simmons, C Wehrmaun, J H Ryan, Cornelius Rowan, Mrs Taylor & children, J Lowell, wife & daughter, Mrs Goldstein B Batiman D McCarty Miss E Cardinell, Miss E Geary, A M Starr, Vic Trevitt, H McCrum, Charles Kendall, H W Hyman, Ben Teal, Joe Teal W A Spelling C Currier, J S Clapp, W F & Co's messenger and 25 in the steerage.

VERDICT.—The jury in the case of the State vs Gilfoy, indicted for the murder of William R Wales, on the 3d of July, rendered a verdict yesterday of murder in the second degree. The case was submitted to them on Thursday at 7 o'clock P M and the verdict was agreed upon yesterday a few moments before 3 o'clock P M. The jury had been out 20 hours.

LADIES' FAIR.—We learn that the ladies of Astoria, of the Catholic denomination, are making extensive preparations for the holding of a grand fair and festival, to commence on next Monday and extend through Tuesday and Wednesday following. The proceeds will be applied toward the erection of a Catholic Church in that town.

SERENADING.—The East Portland Brass Band were out serenading on Thursday evening. They visited a number of our prominent citizens residences and discoursed some very mellifluous strains. The Emmet boys were also out in uniform, and a jolly good time was experienced.

NO VERDICT.—The case of the State vs Ben Marshall, charged with subornation of perjury was tried in the Circuit Court yesterday. The case was submitted to the jury at about half past 4 o'clock P M. No verdict had been agreed upon as we go to press.

INSANE PATIENTS.—Two patients—one from Marion and one from Douglas county—were brought down to the city last evening. They were placed in the Insane Asylum.

THE LECTURE.—A sparse but select audience was present last evening at the new Masonic Hall on the occasion of the lecture and readings given by Mr Maybell. The speaker acquitted himself very creditably indeed when it is considered that last evening was his first effort as a public speaker. His lecture abounded in many beautiful poetic thoughts, and his readings were excellent.

AT THE PARK.—Should the weather to morrow prove propitious, a grand picnic will be given at East Portland Park, under the auspices of Messrs Dexter & Holton. The celebrated 21st Infantry Band has been engaged. The exercises at the grounds will consist of sack racing wheelbarrow racing dancing etc. Refreshments can be had on the grounds in abundance. A rich musical treat can be expected. Admission will be only 25 cents.

Nervous weakness dyspepsia, affections of the liver disturbances of the bowels headaches hypochondria and monomania are among these distressing fruits. It is therefore of great importance that persons whose minds are oppressed with heavy business responsibilities or harassed by family troubles or excited by speculation or perplexed by a multiplicity of enterprises or in any way overtaxed or overworked, should keep up their stamina by the daily use of a wholesome tonic. Thousands of persons thus circumstanced are enabled to bear up against the difficulties in which they are involved and to retain their strength health and mental clearness by the regular use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Diseases which are prone to attack the body when debilitated and broken down by over much brain work or exhausting physical labor are kept at bay by the resistant power with which this incomparable tonic endows the nervous system and the vital organs. LIZ

"What are you up to, Liz?" And Dick Sanders the tin peddler stalked into the large well ordered country kitchen and with only this salutation drew off his gray yarn mittens and proceeded to warm his almost benumbed fingers by the roaring fire that sputtered and crackled under the boiler of clothes.

"That's what I w[illegible] [illegible]. The boiler holds [illegible] don't know. The last time it got to leaking I thought it was all day with the patriarch [illegible]. No wonder that folks blew on my ware."

"I was tellin' Miss Avery," interrupted Liz, "that when she needed any more tin things I hoped she'd send to town after 'em. Your stuff has been to your gab and brag so long that somehow its got a bad edication. Now them pans never behaved like the pans Tim Bucklin used to bring around. They're always a buckling and springing a leak. To speak a little plainer, I'm always afraid to trust 'em, especially when its onusually important that they should hold in."

"What in natur' are you drivin' at, Liz?" inquired poor Dick, a [illegible] look of wonder overspreading his face. But before his companion could have time to reply the door of the sitting room softly opened and a young lady, apparently very deep in thought and very much troubled in spirit, for her eyes were red and heavy with weeping, appeared on the threshold.

"What is it, Flory?" said Liz, scooping the white suds from her strong red arms, and with such a little thrill of tenderness in her voice that the peddler involuntarily turned to see what it could mean, and then remembering his manners said hastily:

"Good morning, Miss Avery; hope you're well."

The young lady gave a slight start of surprise and then recovering herself said with considerable annoyance in her tone:

"I'm quite well, thank you, Dick. I thought you were alone, Liz," and immediately left the kitchen.

"Now what's the matter with her?" inquired the tin merchant. "Golly! ain't she be bawling, though? I tell you what tis, Liz, if a fellow wants to know the secrets of families, all he has got to do is to turn peddler."

"And he—" added Liz, punching the clothes in the boiler with such force as to send the scalding suds in Dick's immediate neighborhood, causing said gentleman to change his quarters without loss of time.

"Say, now, what is it that ails the gal, Liz? I won't say a word about it to anybody. If I do, shoot me."

"How long did you say you'd been traveling round this country?" asked Liz, with a comical twinkle of her comical eye.

"Nigh about twelve years. Why?"

"Because it seems to me pretty near time that you should a learnt that wimmen folks is wimmen folks, and when you'll find me a woman that don't have her crying spells, I'll find you a tin peddler that minds his own business."

"Thank ye, marm," replied Dick dryly. "Have a queer sort of an idee somehow that last remark is intended for me. All day, Liz. Hope the next time I'm round you'll be better natured."

Not a word answered Liz. The peddler jumped into his cart and drove away, and in and out of the suds went those stalwart arms, the muscular and ungainly form keeping time to the quick and defiant music of the rubbing board.

"Oh, he's gone! I am so glad." And now the graceful figure came softly out again and crept close to the side of the busy woman.

"I want you to read my letter, Liz—the one I have just written him."

"Well, who's him? There are two on 'em, you know," replied Liz quietly, and with great self possession.

"Yes, Liz," and now the beautiful brown eyes again overflowed, and the sobbing child drew still nearer as she whispered:

"But there is only one I could write to, of course, even if I knew where he was," with an accent on the personal pronoun that told its own story.

"Then what you mean to tell me is that you have just written a letter to Hiram Scoville?"

"Yes, Liz."

"Wal, go on."

"Don't look at me, Liz, while I read it. I just said this. You know how father and mother have been taking on lately—calling me undutiful, and headstrong, and obstinate, and saying that I meant to break their hearts—?"

"Is this in the letter?" queried Liz.

"No, I am saying this to you. You know, deary, how hard my life has been for the last six months—well, ever since—"

"Yes, Flory, I know all about it. Now read the letter before anybody comes in."

"Dear friend Hiram," came tremulously from the sweet lips.

"Hump!" grunted Liz.

"What else could I say?" said poor Flory despairingly. "He is my friend, isn't he?"

"That depends pretty much on your idea of a friend. My friend don't torment me. He saves me from suffering if he can, and if he can't, bears it with me, carrying as much of the burden as God will let him. No friend will ever ask a woman to marry him the second time after he has been once refused."

"But, Liz—"

"There are no buts in the case."

"Love makes men bold and sometimes reckless. You must think of that."

"Love never does no such thing," said Liz, who was never known to be grammatical, save in moments of excitement.

The trembling girl commenced again: "Dear friend Hiram. Now don't speak again, please, Liz, till I finish," as the strange woman gave unmistakable indications of inward rebellion. "It is the wish of my parents that I write to you, and say that it is their desire I should accept you as my future husband. I don't love you one single bit, and I am sure I never shall; but if you want me under those circumstances, I having nothing more to say, save that I utterly refuse to receive any special attention from you preceding our marriage."

"Well, now, I vow, Flory Avery, I should laugh if anybody in the house was a laying dead. Tell a man you've made up your mind to marry him, and at the same time inform him that all courting has got to be postponed until after the wedding. Do you suppose that because a minister has mumbled over a few words—nothing in the least disrespectful to the minister intended—that on this account kisses and courting will be any the more welcome than now?"

"No, Liz, no! The thought of it drives me wild, but there is nothing left for me to do. Mother is crying up stairs now, and father has hardly spoken a word for a whole week because of my willfulness. I have been reading the Bible for an hour, Liz dear, and that is what has decided me. The command is 'Children, obey your parents,' and there is no way I can dodge it."

"Just like the rest of edikated folks, you have choked yourself to death with the letter and thrown the spirit overboard. Now my common sense tells me that you don't understand the meaning of what you've been reading. It is 'Wives, obey your husbands in the Lord,' and it is 'Children, obey your parents in the Lord.' Now the Lord is love, Flory dear, and he gave you these very feelings of like and dislike, this liking to be with a person or hating to be with a person, to guide you through life. They are weapons that the poor carnal flesh couldn't get along without. Now if you take the pistol that God puts into your hands to keep the wild animals away, and lay it down side of you and let the critters come in and devour you, who's to blame, I wonder? You mustn't think that your Father in heaven didn't know what kind of timber he was putting into you when he got you up. As far as I've observed—and I haven't lived to be thirty years old without learning some things—there is nothing that brings so much misery with it as marriage without love. Don't you do it, Flory dear—don't you do it."

"But, Liz, you know that I shall never love anybody. Oh! why did he go and get married?" And again the beautiful head was bowed upon the faithful bosom of the servant and companion.

"Why did you cut up so with him, Flory? Why did you grieve him by flirting with a fellow you could hardly bear in your sight? How long do you suppose a man with ordinary self respect is going to stand that sort of work? Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind. There is nothing truer than this between the covers of the Bible. If he has married without love he'll have the same kind of a crop."

"What shall I do with this letter, Liz?"

"Burn it up."

"What shall I [illegible] to father and mother?"

[illegible]

It was very plain to the watchful Liz that a storm was brewing. [illegible] day passed on, dinner and tea were over, Liz's clothes had been brought in and nicely folded down, when Flory [illegible] into the kitchen, saying:

"Liz, father has sent for me in the sitting room, and I do wish you could come in some way. I'm so afraid I shall give in if you are not there to strengthen me."

"I'll dodge in after awhile," said Liz. "Keep a stiff upper lip and make a good fight. No father and mother has any right to command a child to marry a man she don't love. The Lord God Almighty is on your side, Flory Avery. Now go along and behave yourself."

Ay, that was a stormy scene. Farmer Avery, who had firmly decided that his daughter should marry the man he had selected, was as hard and cold as stone. Bitter words fell from his lips—words that Flory never supposed he could utter.

"Do you think," said he, "that I am going to permit you to go puling around the house like a sick kitten, because you are wicked enough, mean enough, to be in love with a married man?"

"How do you know he is a married man?" inquired Liz, with such strange earnestness in her voice that Flory caught her breath and grew pale and crimson by turns.

"I saw it in the newspaper with my own eyes."

"Wal," said Liz quaintly, "I saw in the newspaper the other day that Squire Bill Avery was worth $75,000, and I heard that same Squire Avery swear it was the biggest lie that ever was told."

"That's neither here nor there," roared the farmer. "I've made up my mind, and Flory must make up hers. It is Hiram Scoville or no home here any more."

"No home here any more?" moaned poor Flory.

"That's what I said. To-morrow morning will be time enough to give your decision."

"And you, mother," said the poor child, dashing the tears from her eyes.

"We know what is for your best good, Flory. I quite agree with your father."

Not a word was spoken.

A few moments after, Flory and Liz met again in the kitchen.

"What are you going to do about it?" inquired Liz in a most matter of fact manner.

"I am going to pack my trunk to-night and get ready to leave this house to-morrow," replied the almost distracted girl.

"And you won't marry Hiram Scoville?"

"I will never marry Hiram—so help me Father in Heaven!"

"That's the talk!" said Liz, with an ominous shake of the head; "that's the cheese! Now just let your trunk alone to-night, and watch this pumpkin for me. I've got to go out for an hour or two, and I wouldn't have it burn for considerable. I calculate to spread myself on them pies."

"Shall I have to sit here all the time, Liz?"

"Well, I guess you'd better. The tarnal stuff sticks sometimes when you least expect it." And with these words Liz shut the back door and hurried out of sight.

"It's a good five miles there and back," said she to herself. "I can't walk it and get back in any kind of season. Now if this ain't a case of special providence, then I don't know. There's Dick Sanders' tin cart this blessed minute! He's inside getting his supper with old Marm Chase. I'll borrow that vehicle, and if I'm half as smart as I ought to be, he'll never know where in the world it went to or how it got back, unless I'm a mind to tell him—which just as like as not I shall be."

In a twinkling old Dobbin's wrappings were removed, and in a twinkling Liz was in the peddler's seat, and in a twinkling more out of sight. The tin pans rattled and clattered, the bells around the horse's neck jingled merrily, but Liz heard nothing, saw nothing, but the object of her errand. Leaving her strange team a block or two from the principal hotel of the town she had entered, she made her way to that establishment.

"A woman to see you on the steps, Mr Moreland," said a servant in waiting. "Looks like a washer woman. Says she can't come in."

"It's Liz," whispered the gentleman to himself. "Bless the dear creature's heart! what can she want to-night, I wonder. Oh, Flora, Flora!" and with a heavy heart Moreland walked quickly to the door.

Here was a face for an artist—a face upon which true nobility sat enthroned. No need of acquaintance to tell what manner of man he was. He had come to Watertown on business and had informed Liz of his whereabouts. Indeed these two individuals had been in correspondence since the trouble between said gentleman and Flora, and Liz had always known that Philip Moreland was not married; but she wisely kept her counsel, believing that this lesson was needed for the entire subjugation of the rebellious little Flora. Not that there had been any falsehood told, though, in this connection. A Philip Moreland had married, but not this one.

"I've come for you, Mr Moreland," said Liz.

"For me! What for?" inquired the gentleman in bewilderment.

"Get on your great coat and come along; we'll talk afterwards," said the woman in a tone of authority.

"But Flora—"

"Don't know nothing at all about it. She's put her foot down that she won't marry Hiram. Confessed that she loves you, married or single, better than anybody else in the created world, and if she can't have you she'll live single till Gabriel blows his horn, and then look up Philip Moreland."

"Liz, you have taken away my breath."

"Wal, what if I have?" replied the strange woman. "You refused to budge till I did."

The tin cart was a little too much for the anxious lover's risibilities even. He laughed till the tears ran down his cheeks and froze on, and then laughed again until others came to melt them.

Over the hard uneven ground they went bumpity bump, while the bells sounded out a merry peal, which sound Liz declared just as welcome to her ears as any wedding chime she ever heard.

The tin cart was left in the lane, old Dobbin carefully covered, and farmer Nevins' boy was sent to tell Dick Sanders where his establishment could be found.

"Just look here now, ain't that a pretty sight?" and Liz brought her companion to a sudden halt by the kitchen window. There stood Flora, one foot on the stove hearth, her elbow on her knee, her head resting on the palm of her left hand, while with the right she diligently stirred the pumpkin to keep it from burning.

"Set her to work to keep her from thinking," said Liz softly. "Stay here in the porch while I sort of prepare her like. It won't take but a minute," she continued, as the impatient man would have rushed in.

"Oh, Liz, you got back! how glad I am! It's been awful lonesome here. Where have you been?"

"Wal, I had a little arrant about Mr Moreland. I wanted to find out whether—well, you see, whether he was married or not, and I find out he ain't."

"Liz, Liz, Liz, who told you? Speak quick, dear old Liz, or I'll choke you to death."

At this juncture Liz opened the parlor door, and with a burst of tears which the poor old soul couldn't control another moment, sobbed out, "He did!"

[illegible]

Dick left.

A traveler relates that while he was in Utah, [illegible] was also there on a visit. While the renowned dwarf was at a dinner party he jumped from his chair and said with a pompous air, "I cannot understand this polygamy at all." His host, a man six feet high, thereupon exclaimed, "Neither could I, Tom, when I was your size."

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

ADOPTED BY THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN CONVENTION AT PHILADELPHIA JUNE [illegible] 1872

The Republican Party of the United States assembled in National Convention in the city of Philadelphia, on the 5th and 6th days of June, 1872, again declares its faith, appeals to its history and announces its position upon the questions before the country.

1. During the eleven years of its ascendancy it has accepted with grand courage the solemn duties of the time. It suppressed a gigantic rebellion, emancipated four millions of slaves, decreed the equal citizenship of all and established universal suffrage. Exhibiting unparalleled magnanimity, it criminally punished no man for political offenses and has warmly welcomed all who proved their loyalty by obeying the laws and dealing justly with their neighbors. It has steadily [illegible] a now policy toward the Indians. The Pacific Railroad and similar vast enterprises have been generously aided and successfully conducted to completion; the public lands have been freely given to actual settlers; immigration has been protected and encouraged, and a full acknowledgment of the rights of naturalized citizens secured from European powers. [illegible] of National currency [illegible] provided for the National credit, and sustained it under the most extraordinary burdens. It has [illegible] new bonds at lower rates of interest. The revenues have been carefully collected and honestly applied. Despite the annual large reductions from the rates of taxation, the public debt has been reduced during [illegible] Presidency at the rate of $100,000,000 per year. A great financial crisis has been averted [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] difficulties have been peacefully and honorably compromised [illegible] [illegible] the world [illegible].

[illegible]

2. Complete liberty and exact equality in the enjoyment of all civil, political and public rights should be established and effectually maintained [illegible].

[illegible]

6. Any system of the civil service under which the subordinate positions of the Government [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] of office.

7. We are opposed to further grants of the public lands to corporations and monopolies, and demand that the National domain be set apart for free homes for the people.

[illegible]

8. We hold in undying honor the soldiers and sailors whose valor saved the Union. [illegible]

NEW REMEDIES NEW REMEDIES

Dr Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854 for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearney street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences or from virus absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents [illegible] attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has [illegible] years of especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice or depraved sexual indulgence is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, foul breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, [illegible] apply immediately either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME by addressing a letter to Dr Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded free from damage and curiosity to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co, a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy to work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing and may save you many regrets, for as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his offices of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR J F GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1 957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1 957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian. jy6d4pt
